INTRODUCTION

This Guide contains brief descriptions of about 300 collections of family papers, historical manuscripts and other resources of the Special Collections Department of the John C. Pace Library. Included are notes of a few microform files, maps, newspapers and related special holdings of unusual interest.

Other than a few collections cited for their historical or cultural interest, these resources relate exclusively to individuals and organizations in the Florida Panhandle from the late 18th century until the present day. A previous guide, The First One Hundred, was prepared by the Library in 1972, to inform others of the unpublished resources preserved at the young University of West Florida. Since that time, thanks to many friends of the Library and, especially, to the Synergistics Fund, the John C. Pace Fund, the Pat Dodson Fund, and others, numerous collections and separate documents of great regional interest have been acquired. A Guide to Manuscripts and Special Collections is an attempt to describe the major resources -- apart from cataloged books -- now in the Library which have regional, State, or national importance.

The John C. Pace Library takes a good deal of pleasure in presenting this brief catalog of the collections assembled during its first twelve years. We hope you will find it of interest. Some readers may find their own name or that of their family mentioned; researchers may find material worthy of study and investigation. The materials gathered here might be considered "infinite riches in a little room" -- the thoughts, the opinions (sometimes highly controversial), the recounting of experiences in a diary or a love letter, the remarks of political opponents, the realities of earning a living, the description of a battlefield, and even instructions on how to bake a cake.

From the homes of Pensacola, from attics and basements, from shoeboxes and bureau drawers, from shelves in living rooms and attics in dozens of communities of West Florida, these materials have come to the Library. Some were cherished; some, alas, were counted of little worth and had to be rescued from the junk heap. These are more than mere manuscripts. They are the evidence of life and living, of hundreds of human experiences, the reflection of the human condition in this particular corner of the United States. The Gulf Coast has a written history covering four hundred years, and some of the evidence of the men and women who have lived here during two hundred of those years appears in the resources described in these pages.

Following the main entry and the location symbol for the group, each collection is described briefly. An estimate of the size of the collection follows, together with notes of those who were instrumental in acquiring the collection for the University. A special word of commendation is due each of these friends of the Library. It is a source of pride to realize that all but twelve of the collections herein described were the gift of private citizens in West Florida or were purchased by the Library from private funds.

Numerous institutions throughout the world have kindly allowed certain manuscripts or entire collections in their possession to be copied. Users of these copies should be aware that the texts have been made available to the Library for research purposes only, and that permission to reproduce or to publish any portion of such collections must be obtained from the institution owning the originals. The same caution must extend to those items in this catalog which have been "Deposited by" any person or agency. All such collections are the property, not of the University of West Florida, but of the depositor whose name is provided in the note. A complete index to names, places and subjects -- including the names of institutional or personal owners -- has also been provided.

To the extent to which funds, space and personnel allow, it is the intention of the Library to continue its acquisition of the historical record of West Florida. Donors, friends, scholars and students are welcomed to view the collections and to correspond with the Special Collections Department about particular resources. The Library also welcomes information from other libraries and private collectors who may have preserved still other items of value in the study and understanding of the West Florida region.

Lancaster Mass
June 18, 1827

Dear Mother

From Lancaster Mass May 22 was received yesterday. The civility of Henry & Co. in containing was quite interesting. You seem to be so far disposed to forgive me for not writing more frequently in one letter and in the next may make your postage Bill as light as possible cut tail your expenses &c. all this is good advice but will not make me pretend me from writing as often as I have had opportunity. But to tell you the truth I am very busy and have not time to make out my weekly returns I is hindered with my children more than a month since and I am indebted to the politeness of Mr. Mann the clerk of the yard for assistance since that time. But my burdens are 200 times greater now than before. My Bostonians were exchanged for Padres. I am bothered almost to death with them they pretend to be workmen and know nothing about the business. One man was hired at Mobile and sent here at $2.50 per day and I candidly confess to you that he drove a carriage for me in New York and my Eyesight serves me. The U.S. Ship John Adams arrived one day before yesterday with 25 men sick on board with the yellow fever the first - papers relating to lumbering, the Navy Yard, St. Vincent Island lighthouse, and the Confederate States of America, 1846-1865. The post-Civil War period is reflected in the correspondence of Peter Knowles, Walter Gregory, A. E. Maxwell, and others involved in land speculation in Pensacola, 1869-1871.

The papers of P. K. Yonge include lecture notes at the University of Georgia, 1870-1871; correspondence and papers relating to Christ Church, Pensacola, ca. 1870-1880; and a wide variety of papers relating to his service as British Acting Vice-Consul in Pensacola, 1874-1875, yellow fever, hurricanes, chess, libraries and education; with plats and maps of Florida lands and printed ephemera, ca. 1845-1917.
5,821 pieces. Presented by Miss Marjorie J. Yonge.
288. ZANE, CHARLES SHUSTER (1831-1915) 68-11/28
"Reminiscences of President Lincoln." Typescript, ca. 1910.
2 pieces. Presented by Ernest F. Dibble.
